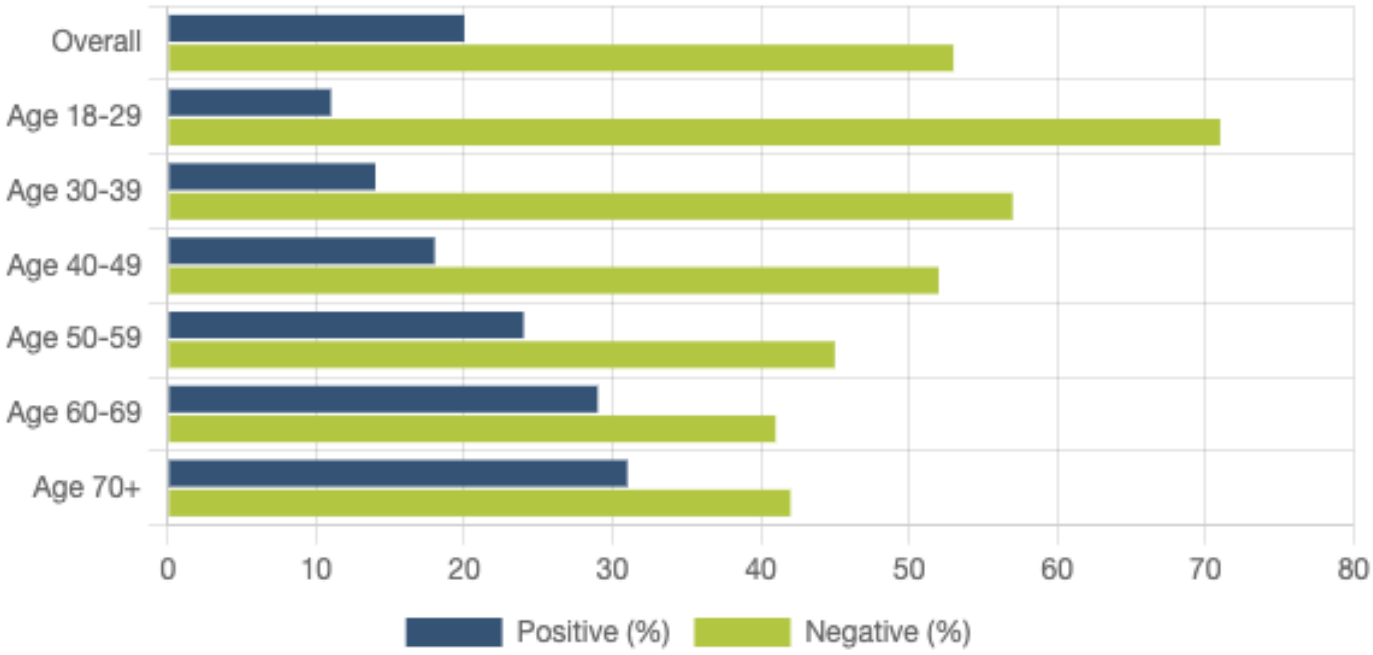
03 71% of young Americans think businesses hurt the environment

Which of the following best describes the impact businesses have on the planet/environment?



“It’s no secret that Americans are paying more attention to our impact on the natural world, and that young people especially think businesses hurt the environment. For any business that hopes to attract those young customers and employees — which means all businesses — improving their environmental initiatives is the right move both economically and environmentally.”

Betsy Stoner
Assistant Professor of Natural and Applied Sciences
Bentley University